

Learning Engagement Policy and Student Attendance

Engaging with your programme is vitally important to getting the most out of your time at the University. Failure to regularly attend lectures and other teaching sessions can be an indication that you are struggling with some aspect of your programme of study or your ability to engage with your studies.

Through the attendance monitoring system we are able to regularly review your record to see if you are having any problems in attending your classes. It is really important therefore that you use the system and register your attendance at all teaching sessions you attend, this will involve 'tapping' your Campus Card against a reader when you go into class. There will be fixed card-readers on the wall of all main teaching rooms, where no fixed reader is available you may be asked to use a hand-held device which will be passed around the class.

When using the system please be aware of the following important information:

You can only register your attendance up to 10 minutes prior to the scheduled start time for the teaching session. If you register any earlier than that your attendance will not be recorded in the system and your attendance record will be affected.

- You do not need to 'tap out' of class at the end of your session
- If you attend a different 'group' session to the one identified on your timetable your attendance will be similarly affected. To avoid this please submit an absence using the student portal and select 'attending an alternative session'. Attendance monitoring staff will then ensure your attendance is recorded correctly.
- If you know in advance that you are going to be absent from class you should report your absence by using the student portal
- The link to the student portal can be found here.

- If you lose your Campus Card you should apply for a replacement immediately using the link to the online store

Important - misusing the system. In most cases this involves students swiping in and then leaving before the teaching session begins or 'buddy swiping' registering attendance at sessions on behalf of friends. This is unacceptable for number of reasons, not least because it limits our ability to identify any problems you may be having but also because it is fraudulent in nature and will be treated as such by the University. Throughout the year the university undertakes regular verification checks to identify fraudulent swiping. Please be aware that identified misuse of the system will be considered as misconduct and will be subject to the University's disciplinary procedures.
